

Office of the President

April 1, 2013

I have known Jordan Gallant for more than ten years. We formerly lived in the same town and I have interacted with her and observed her in a variety of contexts over the years. I would say that I know her quite well.

In my view, Jordan's strongest attribute is her reliability and faithfulness. She keeps her commitments and promises and is very dependable, taking care to complete what she undertakes. She also exhibits a strong degree of empathy and interest in others. In her spare time she led a youth group in her community and is easily able to enter into activities and games with the students who attend and they seem to appreciate her manner and interest in them.

Jordan is a well-rounded individual with interests in sports, music, and other activities. She has been willing to share herself with others and contribute to her community when called upon by offering her talents in service to others. She has shown herself to be someone who has great energy for the activities and programs that she is interested in and has committed to.

Jordan has excellent communication skills and demonstrates a healthy self-confidence while at the same time being flexible and interested in the opinions of others. Jordan is naturally intelligent and exhibits strong leadership ability and a high energy level.

Jordan comes from a stable and loving family. Her family members are mutually supportive and encouraging. Her mother and father are both hard workers and committed to serving others through significant involvement in the community. Her mother is a school teacher so Jordan would be familiar with the role of a teacher and easily able to grasp through “osmosis” a lot of the intangibles that contribute toward someone becoming a successful teacher. I highly recommend her for a teaching position at your school. She is a mature Christian young woman and would contribute greatly to your school’s mission as well as to the development of your students.

Sincerely,
